4. Editing an AI-Generated Campaign for the Indian Youth Market

Question:

Take a campaign idea generated by ChatGPT and manually edit the content brief to better fit the Indian youth market in terms of language, references, or tone. Highlight at least two changes you made and explain why.

Answer:

I selected the Zomato “Mood Hai, Food Hai” campaign from Question 2 and modified it to make it more relatable to Indian college students.

Original AI Campaign Idea:

“Mood Hai, Food Hai”

Example:

“Assignment submitted → Biryani. Feeling sad → Ice cream. Friends coming over → Pizza.”

Manually Edited Campaign:

Campaign Name:

“Mood Kya Hai? Order Kya Hai?”

Revised Reel Concept:

A college student goes through different situations during the day:

- “8 AM lecture miss ho gaya” → Chai + Samosa ☕
- “Attendance short hai 😭” → Comfort food 🍜
- “Assignment finally submitted!” → Biryani 🍛
- “Bhai log hostel mein aa rahe hain” → Pizza + Fries 🍕🍟
- “Pocket money aa gayi!” → Full-on food order 😂

CTA:

“Tumhara mood kya hai? Comment mein food batao!”

Hashtags:

#MoodKyaHai #OrderKyaHai #CollegeFood #DesiGenZ

Two Major Changes I Made:

1. Changed the language to Hinglish.

I changed formal English phrases into expressions such as “Bhai log,” “Attendance short hai,” and “Pocket money aa gayi.” This makes the campaign sound more natural and relatable to Indian college students.

2. Added Indian college-life references.

I introduced situations such as 8 AM lectures, attendance shortages, assignments and hostel friends because these are familiar experiences for the target audience.

3. Added Indian food references.

I included chai, samosa and biryani instead of relying only on generic foods. This gives the campaign a stronger local identity.

Final Conclusion:

The manually edited version is more suitable for the Indian youth market because it combines Hinglish, Indian food, college-life humor and relatable student experiences. This can make the content feel more authentic and increase the chances of comments, shares and user participation.
